SEE THE OPPORTUNITIES

AND THEN OPEN DOORS FOR OTHERS

Madison Pearlman saw a way to bring what she learned in the classroom into the community. Passionate about human rights and migration law, she used the connections she made with U of M faculty and partnered with local agency Welcome Place to establish a work placement opportunity for Robson Hall students to work with families new to Canada.

"By pursuing opportunities available to me during my studies, like being a part of Welcome Place, holding research positions and taking a leadership role on committees, I was able to build meaningful relationships and make an impact with faculty, my fellow students and the greater community."
