TAYLOR POLLARD

BACHELOR'S DEGREE IN ARTS, CLASS OF '16

Creator of Self-Love Campaign
#FlexInMyComplexion

Using her studies in photography and business classes at UCR, Taylor launched a social media movement that empowers young people of color to love themselves.

After her younger sister was bullied for her dark skin tone, Taylor took a photo of her sister and posted it on Twitter with a phrase their grandmother taught them. That phrase-turned-campaign gained support from stars like Alicia Keys, Lupita Nyong'o, LeBron James, and Whoopi Goldberg. The sisters now run a nonprofit foundation that addresses matters which affect our world.

“The lessons here at UCR are very well worth it. Many of the concepts I learned in business helped me save a lot of money, such as inventory control methods, employee management strategies, branding, and marketing. Companies pay a lot of money in hiring people to solve these problems for them, yet here at UCR, we are given that knowledge without recognizing its true value. Part of being the new generation is that we can use concepts that have been around for many years in a much more creative way.”
